

ECOTECH SUMMER OUTING 2012

JM Ecotech reveled in the summertime heat as they took a trip to Coron, Palawan, one of the best summer destinations in the Philippines to be, from May 16 to 19, 2012. Situated in the northernmost group of islands in the province of Palawan, Coron boasts its crystal clear waters, white sandy beaches, and huge rock formations that are all wonderfully natural and far from heavy human influences.

The group stayed for the whole event at the Centro Coron Lodge and Restaurant situated in the town proper. On the first day, the group had a huge welcome lunch by the lodge upon their arrival. After having rested, unpacked and readied for adventure, the group spent the afternoon walking up all the way to the top of Mt. Tapyas to visit the tall white cross and see the sun set over the view of the whole Coron town. Afterwards, they went for a dip at the Maquinit Hot Springs to relieve their aching legs and sore feet.

The second day was full of sun and sea as the group sailed around Coron Island to visit the Siete Pecados Marine Park and snorkel with the fishes. Next, the group had to trek up and down huge stones to get to the Kayangan Lake, a brackish lake hidden in the mountains which is said to be one of the cleanest lakes in Asia. Then, they visited the snorkeling site where an unnamed ship sank during the Japanese invasion. The day ended with a swim at the Twin Lagoon, a lagoon separated from the sea and divided into two by high limestone cliffs.

On the third day, the group hopped from island to island to visit the white sandy beaches of the Calamian group. The group had a fun time swimming, snorkeling and boating along the long shallow stretch of Malcapuya Island. After having lunch, the group then visited Banana Island where corals and fishes can be found even just at the edge of the beach.

Ecotech left Coron on the last day with a lot of breathtaking sights and amazing experiences. As the old adage goes, "Take nothing but pictures, leave nothing but footprints," JM Ecotech did just that.
